

WHY DO PEOPLE LIE?

by Pierre Beaudry, May 12, 2013

Some reflections on the disease of oligarchism.

“We are like those prisoners in the concentration camps who lived under the illusion that their time had perhaps not yet come, when others were being lined up for the gas chambers. No swastika is seen; there are no soldiers barking orders; the phrase ‘Arbeit macht frei’ has not appeared over the entrance to our country.”

FOREWORD

At first, I thought the reason there is so much lying in the world was because of general mental laziness. I was wrong. The reason is to be found within the mortal enemy of mankind: the duplicitous and lying British Empire. The problem in Europe, as Lyn stated, is further aggravated by the fact that people have been raped collectively by centuries of oligarchism, and, most emphatically, during World War I and World War II. But, what makes the difference with the population of the United States?

The reason why people have been lying so much in the U.S., and most emphatically, for the last fifty years, is because they have lost the courage to tell the truth about the fact that the United States has been taken over by a bankrupt British monetary system. People have become cowards by gambling on the fact that the consequences of lying would be less painful than the consequences of telling the truth. As a result of making that choice based on the oligarchical pleasure and pain principle, both Europeans and Americans have lost their courage, their hopes of a future, and will soon also lose their lives, unless we adopt a Hamiltonian-Glass-Steagall policy in the United States, immediately.

INTRODUCTION: IF I KEEP MY EYES CLOSED, WILL PEOPLE SEE ME ANYWAY?

“Europe needs you. We need your courage, the courage to take back that freedom for humanity, of which American people were once so infinitely proud. I therefore urgently ask you to re-instate Glass-Steagall as quickly as is possible”

German councilwoman to members of the U.S.
Congress, May 2013.

Most people don't want to get involved in other people's business because they think that the best way to live is to let live, mind your own business, and close your eyes or look the other way, when you see something wrong. Frankly, that is not very smart. It's actually quite stupid when you think of it, because, if you believe that keeping your eyes closed is safe, you are putting your life in danger. On the contrary, it is much safer to keep your eyes open and get yourself into trouble by telling the truth. Why? Because closing your eyes when everybody else is lying will definitely kill your soul, and will, ultimately, also kill the society you live in. The irony is that most Americans act contrary to their self-interest when they think that closing their eyes to the truth is the best thing all around. That's why I recommend that you stop being stupid before it is too late, look around you, and get yourself into trouble at the first good opportunity.

If you had kept your eyes open, during the last fifty years, you would have noticed that more and more Americans have lost their courage since the assassinations of John and Robert Kennedy, beginning November 22, 1963? Even more citizens have lost their courage since the 9/11/2001 terrorist attack and since the assassination of J. Christopher Stevens, American Ambassador to Benghazi, Libya on 9/11/2012, and even more since the Boston Marathon bombing on Patriot Day, April 15, 2013. What is the net causal connection among these terrorist attacks and the increase in cowardness in the American population? The answer is: the British Empire.

At the present time, the greatest danger is that the great majority of the American population may lose courage completely and commit collective suicide unless they recognize what the British Empire is doing to them. For instance, the Centers for Disease Control \(CDC\) identified on May 3, 2013 that in their Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report that during the last decade of 1999 to 2010, that the suicide rate among middle aged Americans has increased by an unbelievable 28%. As The New York Times reported on May 3: "It is in the baby boomer group where we see the highest rates of suicide. There may be something about that group, and how they think about life issues and their life choices that may make a difference." Indeed, this is the American generation that was targeted by the British Empire, in the aftermath of the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

1. FROM THE BOSTON BOMBINGS TO THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATIONS

Backtrack to 1963 and reflect for a moment on the motion of that span of history. Start with the following truth: The intention behind the Boston Marathon bombings of last month was meant to keep intact the cover-up on the assassinations of the Kennedy brothers. People should be reminded that November 22, 2013 coming up, will be the fiftieth anniversary of the assassination of John F. Kennedy. Americans should use that anniversary as a marker that will finally reveal the truth behind the cover-up of this abomination and make public the reasons why American society has been so perverted and destroyed by the British Empire system since that fateful day. If you were to project your mind, properly, by understanding that what must take place before next November is to change what should have been done during the last fifty years, then you will have understood how we must correct the present intolerable situation.

During the last fifty year period, the great majority of the American population knew there was foul play on the part of the United States Government, and believed there was a cover-up that has lasted until today. However, most people have remained silent about this cover-up, because they did not want to get into trouble and didn't have the courage to risk having to face the music, if they were to speak out. People refused to see that by keeping quiet, they were not only condoning the real killers of the Kennedys, but they were also causing the destruction of the United States as a sovereign constitutional republic, because America had been created for the explicit purpose of telling the truth about oligarchism. Those foolish people committed menticide by omission. It was this cover-up which caused the paradigm shift of pessimism that transpires through every pore of American life today.

In other words, it was not the assassination of the American President and of his brother that caused the paradigm shift, as such; it was the acceptance by the population to keep quiet about the cover-up that followed, which caused the destruction of the United States. The purpose of the assassination was to make the population scared instead of angry, cowardly instead of courageous, and to make them fearful to the point that they would accept cover-ups as the new way of life in America. To accept lies and deception as a ways of life was a deliberate act of brainwashing an entire population by intimidation and terror. That was the intention behind the Kennedy brothers' assassinations. As a result, the American population has become more fearful of government abuse of civil liberties than of terrorist actions coming from the outside. And, for the same reason, Democratic Party congressmen fear denouncing Obama's actions domestically, and abroad. The time for decisive action has come because the British know only too well that if you kill the courage of the American Congress, you also kill the historical intention of America.

That is why the truth about the Kennedy assassination must be told at all cost if the American people wish to have a future. So, the next weeks and months are going to be the test of courage to see if Americans will survive the genocide that is being prepared for them by the British Empire. The point is that, ultimately, lying has already caused far more damage to America than if the truth had been told.

2. IS LYING NOT COMMITTING MENTICIDE AND SUICIDE BY OMISSION?

Ask yourself: Why do people lie? Sometimes people lie to prevent someone else from being hurt, when a loved one has an incurable disease, for instance, or when the truth is too complicated to explain, as when a young child wants to know where babies come from. These are not the lies I am talking about. These are little white lies. What I am referring to are the lies that tear apart the souls of men; lies that hurt the soul so much that they can kill the soul to the point that the victims become as living dead. Such lies are deliberately staged to target the universal principle of creativity. For example, refusing to speak out when an injustice is being committed. Who dares speak out, today, against the return of the concentration camps in Europe? At what cost is the American population keeping silent before the injustice currently being committed by the Maastricht machine against every European nation? Why won't Americans realize that what was done to six million Jews during World War II, is, again, being done to about eight hundred million Europeans today?

The reason may be a bit complicated to explain, but it is essentially found in the different forms of lying. The simplest and most effective form of oligarchical lying is the following: “Americans have to support the opposition in Syria, because the Syrian government is using chemical weapons against its own people.” That’s how the lie works. That is the same lie that started the Iraq War, and this is the type of lie that starts almost any war. Everybody knows it is a lie, but most people are scared to denounce it publicly.

That lie is the same as those disguised under the garb of politeness and of keeping company manners. You tell an obvious lie about Uncle Joe during Sunday dinner, and no one around the table dares to contradict you. As a matter of fact, lying in order to start a war has been the oldest company manners trick in the book, because it is always a test balloon to see if the population has enough courage to contradict it and if it will have the courage to stick with the truth. If you lose your courage in such a Sunday dinner situation, if you don’t stick to the truth, you have begun the countdown toward your eventual menticide and suicide.

Figure 3 Your Queen wants you to change: “Let the real man in you drown and save the polite fake”

This cartoon (Figure 3) is not an irony because the human mind is debased instead of being uplifted. This is typical British black humor. What’s the difference between the two images? In the left image, the man in the water is drowning as a human being; in the right image, the same man survives as a fake human being. That transformation reflects how the oligarchy treats human beings as animals. That's the reality that people need to discover inside of themselves simply by looking into a mirror. There you might discover that the entire world is composed of about 1% of real human beings and about 99% of fakes. The point is that this cartoon is a lie, but it is a lie which tells the truth in spite of itself. So, the question is: is it better to die as a real human being or to survive as a fake? That's the question that every member of the human species is asking about human survival in the world today.

In the present world strategic situation, the policy makers are all fakes while everybody else is drowning. The British oligarchy is betting on the fact that Europeans, and especially Americans, don't have the same moral principles that the World War II generations had when it comes to standing up and fight to save Europe from the current fascist dictatorship.

This form of cheating has become the new way of life in the western world, today, because the principle of sufficient reason no longer means anything, and people have lost their sense of future. This sort of fakery represents the slow acting poison that eventually kills the souls of millions of people and turns them into British living zombies without even having them realize it. This is a social perversion which has been increasing with the advent of the service economy. More and more people lie today as a means of attaining better social status, because there is no longer any social morality about work and competency in the workplace. The value of work is no longer in your labor, because you no longer have creative labor. Labor no longer has any value; it's how you cheat on labor that counts.

Services are the lying pogroms in which cheating and lying have become the motive for promotion. Today, society rewards those who master the art of lying. The better you lie, the bigger your salary. The monetary system, for example, is a complete fake. Aside from the commercial side of the banking system, the rest is fake money, monopoly money. Not only is derivative money completely fake, but the people handling that money are also fake. They are not real human beings. Fakery is the form of behavior that has taken over the banking system for the last three decades and which has brought the monetary system into total bankruptcy. We must dump the present fake monetary system with its phony money and return to the Hamiltonian credit system in which only the principle of creative labor can be made to work productively.

The point to be stressed is that all those who have compromised themselves with this unseemly habit of faking and lying, have lost their creative powers, because their lying imaginations have rendered them completely impotent and cowardly with respect to reality. Their minds have shrunk to the point of being completely centered on how to say things that are expected of them within the restrictive environment of their fishbowl, and never will they dare say something that might displease or offend someone within the safe and polite confine of that fishbowl.

The point, therefore, is that only the truth, and the fight for the truth, can maintain the integrity of an individual, and nothing else. When the loss of integrity no longer matters in a society, when the playfulness of cheating is more valued than the integrity of labor, then society has lost its moral fitness to survive, and is on its way to extinction. Isn't that where we are heading? Isn't it time to break the fishbowl of the earth?

3. WHY DOES THE TRUTH ABOUT BRITISH IMPERIAL LYING NEED TO BE SHOUTED?

“C’est l’empire britannique, imbécile!”

Jacques Cheminade

I never thought the day would come when I would need to ask such an outrageous question in one of my reports. You would think that the need to tell the truth about lying is so self-evident that it would not be necessary to remind people of it. But, we are living in such distorted times that white has been made to appear black, from one day to the next, and people have not even taken notice of it. However, what is self-evident on one side of the Atlantic might not be such to others on the other side. Let me explain.

There are two main forms of lying that have nearly destroyed European and American societies completely during the last fifty years. The first form of lying is personal and is aimed essentially at avoiding getting into trouble. That form expresses itself in different ways such as lying to prevent taking responsibility, lying to shift blame on to someone else, or lying simply to promote oneself; but in all cases, the intention is to manipulate the way you want to be perceived by others. That is the crux of the whole matter: perception. Perceptions are the chains that people put on their own two feet in order to go along with what the oligarchy decides is good for them.

Let’s take the most deadly case of fakery. Why is keeping silent in front of a lie deadly for your soul? Because it is an act of treason that you commit against your own mind, against your own creative powers. Such a lie is the mental equivalent of suicide because it destroys your dignity and your ability to survive. If you make a habit of this sort of lie, it will lead you to menticide, and ultimately to suicide, because it will turn you into a helpless schmuck at the same time that your conscience is crying out the truth. This is how children are taught to get away with lying by appearing to be polite and civilized in the company of adults. Unfortunately, children are too young to realize that this form of gambling only creates losers.

The second form of lying is institutional, and its purpose is to gain power and control over the governing bodies of society. This is lying for power, which has dominated Europe for at least the last 5,000 years. That is the oligarchical form of lying and cheating, which is used to recruit gamblers and professional court liars, like most university professors, either willingly or by way of blackmail or both. In all cases, the intention is to corrupt society, deliberately, and make every member of society accept the premise that “we are all polite liars,” and that some are more polite than others.

For example, when the Bush and Obama administrations accepted to be complicit in the British-Saudi cover-up of 9/11/2001, and in the Benghazi cover-up of 9/11/2013, it was not a mistake on their parts; it was a deliberate act of terror against the American population, and it was meant to launch a Hundred Years War in the name of Queen Elizabeth II. The immediate purpose was to turn the American Constitutional Republic into a European Parliamentary system.

Since this deliberate act of terror by the Obama administration against American citizens has not yet been publically denounced by the two Houses of Congress, it makes you wonder if the United States will be able to get out of this mess. Does money have such weight in such a circumstance? Not really! Because the monetary system, which is essentially the London controlled Wall Street system, is bankrupt. What has weight is the political power to scare people from speaking out when they hear a lie. And that is how Obama and Prince Phillip test your resiliency.

4. HOW THE BRITISH OLIGARCHY LIES TO GAIN POWER.

If you pay attention to how the most powerful banking magnates in the world, today, have made their fortunes, you will discover that it is through the invention of a lying system based on fear. The intention of this One World Banking System was created in order to eliminate sovereign nation states, generate wars, and establish the power of lying as the new rule of law among divided nations. The British call it "Governance." That's the way that royal families have captured power throughout history, for example, and this is how they have maintained themselves as the gods of Olympus above the common mortals. You may ask why they were so successful, and for so long. The reason is simply because of the pure evil power to divide and conquer. And this power is given to them because people are stupid enough to believe this form of lying, and the fake world that comes with it. The point is that Kings reign where stupid people admire charming ceremonial fantasies. That is why the queen of England, Elizabeth II, likes to make believe that she is out there just for show.

The mistake that people make is to think that oligarchism is in fact merely a show. Wrong. The intention of oligarchism is very real and it is aimed at eliminating what is creative in mankind. Its purpose is to replace creativity by a systematically faking form of behavior that generates an artificial species of human beings who are no longer human beings, but a sort of “elegant” species which is only centered on how it looks, and whose only concern is to follow a code of behavior that makes you acceptable to society.

The most complicated aspect of this oligarchical form of lying is the ceremonial and correct conduct known as “protocol.” This form of correct conduct was created to replace truthful behavior in everything you do, everything you say, and everything you wear, including everything you eat and how you eat it. That is also how the protocol of the Parliamentary system works. It is made up of formulas and formulas of formulas. In that sense, oligarchism is the mathematics of company manners.

If you follow that system, you become a complete artificial being; YOU ARE WHAT YOU APPEAR TO BE. If you APPEAR your best, you ARE your best. How you appear becomes your ontological identity. As the subject of the oligarchy, you are no longer a real human being. You have become an automaton with only one concern: Am I accepted? How am I doing? How do I look? This oligarchical system of artificial behavior is established on a great amount of memorizing and reasoning in which human beings become mere puppets in the game of social voyeurs. In other words, oligarchism is built on a system of lies that are made to appear to stand on their own, as if they were their own truths. When you think of it, you realize that such an oligarchical system of fakery was made to replace human behavior. In the oligarchical system, lies are no longer lies; they become well dressed and well-behaved truths. This planned fakery is as artificial as the derivative financial system which is crumbling around us today and the result is that human beings become failed animals.

For example, look at the British Royal family. It’s pure perception. It is the epitome of the lying polite society, a complete fallacy of composition. The British have not only made Royalty the flip-side of republicanism, but also the flip-side of truth and reality. The British Royals live lies as truths, which are erected as standards for everyone to admire and to respect. Queen Elisabeth II, for example, is the perfect example of respectability. Yet, she only exists because the British people have been made to believe that pompous form of derivative fiction is better than reality. As Lyn put it a few days ago: “Queen Elizabeth is a sub-human, because she is a complete monetarist fake.” (Lyndon LaRouche, NEC Meeting for May 7, 2013)

Such complexity of lies as British Empire fakery is intended to create a cover for global warfare against mankind in which no one is willing to say no to war. When the truth is turned into pure perception, then reality no longer exists. The danger of playing such games is that the intention leads directly to a thermonuclear war of extinction of the majority of the human species, which is the stated intention of Queen Elizabeth II. That intention was endorsed by President Barak Obama, when he awkwardly toasted the queen at a reception dinner at Buckingham Palace on May 24, 2011. See (Figure 5) The truth of the matter is that by toasting the Queen of the World, Obama was actually toasting the reduction of the world population by six billion people in the immediate period ahead.

Figure 5 President Barak Obama making a “faux pas” while toasting the Queen. He was politely put in his place with a resounding “God Save the Queen.” (Picture credit, YouTube)

Similarly, the system of derivatives, which has been dominating the world monetary system in the last thirty years, is nothing but the financial arm of this fake British imperial system of lies that has come crashing down on society like a five hundred pound tick on a tired dog. The bad joke is that the derivative system was not built to make money as such, but to get bankers gain ascendancy and power over national governments. The aim is not greed, but blood sucking genocide aimed at reducing the world population from seven to about one billion people and at making believe that virtual reality is better than reality. This is why the biggest fear of the derivative system is transparency and Glass-Steagall. You adopt Glass-Steagall now and you will destroy British Empire once and for all.

How? By eliminating the fictitious derivative process from this financial system, you also automatically eliminate the oligarchical model. As the model of the British Empire, the derivative system is nothing but a combination of information and future pricing calculations. That’s all it is. As a result, the system creates trillions of dollars of fictitious casino capital. This is the biggest fakery ever attempted to make believe that virtual is better than real. In other words, the derivative product is a virtual mathematical object which must be disassociated from the production of real physical goods, but must be connected to them by imaginary strings called financial contracts such as debt obligations, swaps, futures, options, caps, , and various forms of their combinations. Those fake strings are the so-called real values behind the system, which makes believe that derivative financing is the real economy, while the production of tangible goods are merely their shadows. This is precisely how reality got replaced by oligarchism.

This form of gambling has attracted foolish bankers and governments alike into thinking that derivatives could give them access to a power which was “too great to fail.” In other words, bankers created a “too big to fail” idea as a blackmail bluff that everybody knows about, but that no one dares to denounce, because if they do, they will be made responsible for the crash of the system. How can people be foolish enough to believe this, when all they have to realize is that when a banking system has to resort to such a “big lie” it is because it is already bankrupt?

This is the reason why Glass Steagall needs to be restored immediately as a Hamiltonian banking system. Derivative products are essentially oligarchical lies; they make you believe that you can turn nothing into something, and that you can make money out of pure bluff. And that has become the rule and principle that this bankrupt system is attempting to defend at all cost. This is why the priority of the FDIC, for example, is to first protect derivatives, not real bank accounts. That is how the unreal has become real. The next thing you know, people will be told that lying has become the new form of truth, and the majority of the people will believe it.

I don't need to remind you that a lying conscience is always hard to maintain, because it cannot stand naturally on its own and cannot last for long, not even as an accepted social contract. Time is very short and if you are too cowardly to say publically that the emperor has no clothes, then, the ridicule of British imperial politeness will surely kill you, and you can kiss our great American Constitution goodbye.

In ending this section, it is useful to remind people that, during the 1960's, the psychological warfare division of British intelligence used the Satanic MK-ULTRA cult, Ordo Templi Orientis (OTO) of Aleister Crowley to subvert the United States by introducing drugs and the British disease known as the Beatles. In the 1970's, the U. S. Defense Department used the psychological warfare tactics of Satanist high priest, Michael Aquino, to terrorize the Vietnamese population. As Jeff Steinberg reported, Lt. Colonel Aquino was a Satanist high priest and a pedophile pervert, who subverted the U.S. Military with top Pentagon clearance. Aquino personally devised satanic psychological warfare scenarios for the American Government. Today, President Barak Obama uses the same OTO psychological warfare methods against the Arab population of South West Asia. It is highly probable that the Benghazi assassination of American Ambassador, Chris Stevens, was also one of such OTO scenarios.

In any case, as Lyn stated, the Benghazi Affair is not only the worst cover-up scenario in the history of the United States, but it is the one that must unravel the truth behind the cover-up of the Assassination of President Kennedy. Why? Because the same satanic forces that killed John F. Kennedy are also behind every terrorist cover-ups of the last fifty years. In fact the choice of 9 and 11 for the date of the terrorist attack of the New York Twin Towers can be found in the 9 Satanic Sins and the 11 Satanic Rules of Anton LaVey's Satanic Bible.

5. HOW THE FRENCH HAVE LEGISLATED A HIDDEN PEDOPHILE LIE

After the British, the French are the most polite people in the world. On April 24, 2013, the Parliament of the French National Assembly adopted a law in favor of homosexual marriages, thus legitimizing pedophilia. This is not the first case where same-sex marriage has been legislated. In 1996, President Bill Clinton signed the Defense of Marriage Act without making a fuss. In the case of France, however, an entire nation has been mobilized in the streets and in the middle of the biggest financial crisis in history. However, no one said that the intention behind same sex-marriage was to legalize pedophilia. Indeed, no one dared pronounce the word “pedophilia” in the dignified French National Assembly, because the truth cannot be told in the French National Assembly, or in the streets for that matter, without breaking the French Libel and privacy law. In France, the burden of proof is on the defendant. The vote on this homosexual lie was 331 in favor and 225 against, and it was in accordance with party affiliations.

Under the guise of defending the principle of equality for all, which is the most sacred principle of all French political principles, this new form of the big lie that the French have adopted is an incredible law which actually gives adults the right to abuse children and educate them, legally, to become polite deviants. This is the new French style morality called “have your private sex with children, and no one will have the legal right to denounce you.” It seems that the French have gone completely bonkers and completely forgot that God had, actually, created “Adam and Eve,” and not “Adam and Steve.”

The closest that some opponents came to telling the truth about the unbelievable underlying intention of pedophilia, was Jean-Christophe Fromantin of the Union of Independent Democrats (UDI), who stated in the Assembly that “under the pretext of giving equality to adults, you have caused an inequality for children who will be denied the right to have a father and mother.” (Le Figaro.fr 2013/04/23) The untold story, here, is that homosexuals are attempting to legitimize their hedonistic agenda by having the right to do their thing legally with children and get away with it.

The proposed legislature had been introduced during the worst economic crisis in the history of France, with the obvious intention of creating a diversion, but also potential Jacobin mob reactions against homophobic tendencies across France. Now French society will be torn up and divided as they were during the reign of terror under the French Revolution. The spokesman for the Union for a Popular Movement (UMP), Hervé Mariton, accused the socialists of “lighting the fuse of homophobia and to add crisis to the crisis by creating tensions.” (Le Figaro.fr, 2013/04/23) This only goes to confirm that lying has become the underlying rule of law in France.

The problem with this homosexual legislation is not in the sexual proclivity itself, but in the British imperial intention of imposing deviancy on French society as a whole. As a result, the French have now gone from “we are all liars” to “we are all deviants.” The British imperial intention is to break up France as a whole in two easy steps. The first step was to eliminate the nation-state under the Maastricht Treaty; the second one is to eliminate family unity.

Think of this British operation as the second Battle of Agincourt, but not as it was reported to you in the history books. The truth of this battle was not as English pride would have you believe. The battle was not won because of the exhausted and courageous outnumbered English Army of Henry V and “his band of brothers,” but because the heavily armored French soldiers had gotten bogged down in sucking mud and the English longbow men fired blindly at them from afar, as if they had been sitting ducks. As it was on Crispin Day, October 15, 1415, so today, the French people are paralyzed in the mud of their lying National Assembly, while they are being fired upon from afar by the British Empire.

Lastly, you should know that in France, the law against invasion of privacy is so strong that an infraction against someone's private sexual life is considered an act worse than rape. If you have followed the saga of the sexual pig, Dominique Strauss Khan, on the French side of his lurid affair, you will understand why the French media did not dare tell the truth. Today, in France, rape of privacy is a crime, while rape in privacy is legal. The Law on privacy, Article 9 of the Civil Code, which was adopted by an Act of Parliament on July 17, 1970, established that everyone has the right to his or her private life. In absence of a precise legal definition of "private life," the courts and magistrates have specified that private life includes "love life, friendships, family circumstances, leisure activities, political opinion, trade union or religious affiliation, and state of health." In other words, in France, if people in public office are perverts or worse than Nazis, you have no right to denounce them. Your right of free speech stops where the privacy law begins.

6. THE ONLY TRUTHFUL LIE IN POLITICS IS PLATO'S NOBLE LIE

The only good lie I can think of is the one that tells the truth as in a mirror. Such is the privilege of poetic license or of an irony of classical artistic composition, that only creative minds are capable of wielding without falling into the pits of cynical pessimism. And the reason why this is the case, is because an intelligent man is always capable of lifting the light of truth from behind the mask of lies, no matter how bad reality may appear to be. This is how creative artists, like the American illustrator, Charles Allan Gilbert, love to play hide and seek with intelligent people. In a sense, this painting could only have been composed by an American, because only an American citizen, or equivalent, can have the sort of mind that can create such an irony.

The point to understand about Gilbert's drawing is that, although it was composed in 1892, this is the way that a true American citizen should see things and most emphatically the portrait of Queen Elizabeth II, today. This portrait shows you how to look at American oligarchism, which is just as venal and deadly as the Queen of England for the American system. (Figure 6)

Figure 6 The ironic make-up of the mask of truth: "All is Vanity" by Charles Allan Gilbert. (1892)

The portrait of Gilbert is a true irony of classical artistic composition in the fact that it is a double image that represents both itself and something opposite to itself; that is to say, the image of a woman admiring herself in the mirror, and her image and reflexion sending back the image of death. This process expresses the same principle that makes things go from the non-living to the living and from the living to the cognitive. It is that higher form of inclusion which comes from the future that creates the ambiguity of the process of irony, and from which sense perception beauty is never what it appears to be.

The ambiguous image represents precisely Lyn's idea of metaphor; that is, two contradictory images of sense perception and the imagination that the mind connects to create a third mental image which is an uplifting irony: the first is literal, the second is a higher composite of the literal and the reflected, and the third is the surprising connection of the two as something completely new and shocking to the human mind. Thus, Gilbert shows the true beauty of the mind in contrast with the fake beauty of perception. Plato called such a gestalt the dialectics of the Socratic dialogue, but Hegel made a mess of it and the process has never been understood properly since. This sort of composition goes well with the work that Gilbert had to do during World War I as a camouflage artist for the U.S. Shipping Board (The Emergency Fleet Corporation).

Figure 7. Was the devil's head in Queen Elizabeth II's hair a deliberate engraver's irony? Some Canadian monarchists very seriously think so. (Paper clipping from the Vancouver Sun, April 30, 1959.)

However this is not the only portrait which tells this sort of truth about Elizabeth II. The portrait of the Queen printed on the Canadian banknotes, during my youth, told a similar truth that French Canadians used to enjoy deliciously and used to draw in red ink on their dollar bills. On the other hand, very few English Canadians found this funny, and even fewer of them took the time to figure out its significance. However, some hardnosed Canadian monarchists did get upset about it and reported their displeasure to the Canadian Government and to the Queen via the Vancouver Sun.

Plato's "Noble Lie" pertains to that same category of irony as in Figure 6 and Figure 7. In The Republic dialogue, Plato divided society into three categories of people: the Guardian rulers, the helpers, and the farmers or craftsmen. In Book III, Plato had Socrates tell the story of how God created these three categories of souls, and this is what became known as the "Noble Lie." Socrates said that if the citizens of the Republic believed in that myth, it would be good, because "it would have a good effect in making them more inclined to care for the state and one another." (Plato, The Republic, Book, III, 415 D)

Plato described how God distributed different degrees of gold, silver, and bronze in every soul he created, and society was, therefore, composed unevenly of these three different categories of souls: the golden soul, the silver soul, and the iron or bronze soul. The golden souls were the guardian rulers, the silver souls were the helpers, and the bronze souls were the laborers. Those three categories of souls were kept apart from one another because they were not allowed to intermarry for fear of corruption.

God had also created in the human mind different degrees of aspiration in becoming a golden soul for the benefit of the Republic, therefore, helpers aspired to become guardians, and workers aspired to become helpers and Guardians. If the ruler's children were found to have silver or bronze in their souls, they were demoted to a lower social category, and if a farmer's child were to be found with gold in his soul, he was educated to become a guardian ruler of the Republic. This Noble Lie was fed to the masses like a religious belief, and was established with the purpose of improving society, because Plato knew that the people were not smart enough to know what their best interest was. They had to have a State controlled education. Indeed, one look at American public education system and the government of the United States, today, and you realize to what degree Plato was absolutely right.

The irony about the Noble Lie, however, is that evil leaders throughout history have denounced Plato as tyrannical and abusive in his anti-democratic attitude because they did not understand his metaphor. Plato didn't trust democracy and considered that only those who have the morality of a golden soul were capable of understanding the truthfulness of this metaphor, because those three degrees were for Plato a way to understand the different degrees of energy-flux-density that were required in the fiery development of the human mind. Therefore, the quality of the golden souls was capable of understanding higher levels of ironies that the silver and the bronze souls were unable to access.

Unfortunately, this Noble Lie idea was perverted by many and was misinterpreted far and wide by people such as Leo Strauss, who claimed that Plato's idea gave a pretext for fascist governments to justify themselves by lying to the people under the pretext that it was for their own good. Strauss was obviously incapable of understanding Plato's intention, which he considered merely as a "necessary illusion." (Leo Strauss, The Rise of the Politics of Fear.) However, one thing is clear: the time has come to restore the full significance and self-consciousness of Plato's idea, today, in the United States, if we wish to see the rest of the world survive.

In conclusion, I must say that the choice between lying and telling the truth is actually very simple. Either we let humanity drown helplessly in the Thames of British imperial fakery or we empower humanity with the American system of telling the truth like it is. The point to be made is that the British controlled world monetary system is bankrupt and the only solution is to adopt a Hamiltonian legislation in the United States, before Europe collapses. This means that Americans have to bring Lyn's message to Europe in a clear and unmistakable way, which is to say, that Americans will not allow Europeans to be destroyed: "Injustice to anyone in the world, is an injustice to all," clamored Lyn from his NEC Meeting for Saturday, April 27, 2013.

Therefore, the present world situation calls for a return to Plato's republican principle of justice (agape) for all nations. As Lyn made the call from Germany, Americans must fight for a return to the justice of the Peace of Westphalia by helping European nations to survive, because only the United States can provide the solution to this crisis. And the best way to help Europe is for United States to break with the British Empire system of lying, and adopt Glass-Steagall. This would make Europeans realize that not only there is a life after the British Empire system and Maastricht; but that it will be a much better life once you have identified who your enemy really is. If Americans don't help Europe, then both America and Europe will be destroyed. The strategic situation is that simple. As the prisoners in Plato's Cave know only too well, you cannot free yourself without freeing others, because we are all in the same sinking Titanic. This means that unless we free Europeans from the British Empire System now, you can kiss the future of the entire planet goodbye. But, the point is that we cannot free ourselves unless we stop lying to ourselves. And, the only way to stop lying to ourselves is to free others from lying.

In other words, if you were to adopt the principle of the Peace of Westphalia, you would discover that this is the best global model for a human society, because instead of misleading someone else for your own apparent benefit, you would be looking for what benefits others and what improves human economic wellbeing as a whole. In other words, to be human is to put yourself into someone else's shoes and to look at the world through their eyes. This is the only truthful way to look at other nations, because this is how natural law works. The issue is not to be paternalistic about it, but to be respectful of what the needs and aspirations of other nations are.

Think, therefore, what tomorrow's world could be like, if the majority of Americans were concerned about having other nations be put in their most favorable light. The entire world would embrace the American intention and, thus, the fallacy that America is Number One would be replaced by humanity. This is the biggest fear that the British oligarchy has. The greatest fear that the gods of Olympus have, is that of a human creative explosion coming out of a new Promethean use of fire from America. If that were to happen, then, the world would become the only fusion form of fire weapon capable of destroying the Steagall policy back into application with rest of the world will fall nicely into Empire; it will fall on a detail, and the fire known as "the advantage of the other," that can burn eternally, because that is the only oligarchical lie, once and for all. Get the Glass- a Hamiltonian intention in Washington, and the place. But, don't worry about the British devil is in the detail.
